A magical adventure full of original and fantastic concepts, friendship, and a dash of humour.

Magic ads? When a couple of schoolmates recruit Tobi for their crew, it all sounds too good to be true: uploading old toys to an online marketplace, selling them, and buying real magical tools instead. Tools like invisibility hats and magic quills that could make some of Tobi's problems vanish into thin air. But the whole thing has a catch: the tools are secondhand and have a will of their own. And then there are the Pirates, a rival crew out to steal any magical object they can get their hands on – and they are closing in on Tobi's crew …

Creative People:

Author: Ester Kuhn has a lucky charm for each of her stories that accompanies her writing process. For SOS – Mission Flower Dust it was a plush bee, of course. The author lives with her family in the Saarland. When she’s not busy writing, she works as a lecturer for child day care.

Illustrator: Kristina Kister, born in Kazakhstan in 1992, studied communication design in Dessau, Berlin, and Dortmund. When she isn’t busy illustrating children’s or young adult literature, explanatory films or character designs for animated films, one can meet her while she’s going for a walk with her dog Mei.
