A charming Christmas story with repeating phrases that children will love – for reading again and again.

It is Christmas Eve morning. In the hare family's burrow at the edge of the woods, Emil the little hare is waiting for Father Christmas. Daddy hare is looking out of the window. 'Emil!' he calls suddenly. 'I can see a bright light!' Could that be Father Christmas? Emil has to find out! He lollups through the woods. Is that something shining right there, between the roots of the old oak tree?

Creative People:

Author: Katharina E. Volk was born into a large family in the Westphalian town of Witten, where material for stories was provided not least by the experiences she had with her four younger brothers. Having trained as a bilingual secretary, she now devotes herself to writing novels, picture and children's books.

Illustrator: From her earliest days, Tina Nagel loved getting her ideas down on paper. So she studied graphic design in Trier, focusing on illustration and book design. Today she is working as a freelance illustrator and lives in Berlin and near Vienna.
