A funny approach to everyday family chaos and the different point of views of children and adults.

Let's be real: adults can be quite strange! They cheer when the children are jumping on the trampoline, but not so much when it's on the sofa. They really like paintings, but only on a piece of paper and not on the wallpaper. And splashing is only funny at the beach and not in the bathroom. No, you really can't please the adults ...

Creative People:

Author: Franziska Gehm, born in 1974, studied in Ireland and the UK, worked in Austria and Denmark, and now lives with her family in Munich, working as an author and translator. She has published numerous children's and YA novels, which have been translated into many languages. As soon as her books will be published in Llamanian, she'll go on a reading tour to the Andes.
