A story about knights, dragons, courage, and friendship with modern illustrations.

There's a rumour at Castle Kingsbeard: The mean troll king has gained control of a dragon and is going to attack! In order to find out whether there's truth to it, the knights are sent out to investigate – and squire Ragnar is to accompany them. Ragnar is very excited, but plans go awry pretty quickly and he ends up deep in the enemy fortress – right in front of the dragon. But is the dragon truly as dangerous as everyone believes or is there more to it than it seems?

Creative People:

Author: Anette Thumser, born in 1964 in Frankfurt, lived in Hannover, Lagos (Nigeria), the Taunus, and the Wetterau before returning to Frankfurt. She basically only turned in a circle. Nowadays, she has two adult children and a cat – and regularly sorts out her book shelves since books seem to multiply as if by magic!

Illustrator: Irina Avgustinovich is a children's illustrator from Belarus now based in Portugal. Despite having a bachelor's degree in classical painting and ceramics, she found herself in children's illustration. She learns from her 6-year-old son's outlook on life. Irina is so happy to be involved in his world of spontaneity and creativity. She believes in the power of imagination. She loves creating new worlds and the play of textures of materials. For 15 years in illustration, she has created about 50 books for both the Russian and British market, and several more are being prepared for publication.
