A fabulous story about friendship and solidarity.

The animals of the forest are preparing for their annual celebration. Everyone wants to participate, but the coordination is more difficult than expected. The squirrel is forgetful, the snail slow, and the young raccoons are a little clumsy. Everything would go much smoother, if the sly fox had overseen the preparations. After all, he always knows best – according to himself. Or does he?

Creative People:

Author: Katharina Neuschaefer studied musicology and German studies. Since 2003, she hosts Do Re Mikro, the Bayerischer Rundfunk's classical music radio show for children. She has written many audio dramas and musical stories for children on which she also worked as a director, winning several awards for her work. She also published books and audio books about the world of myths and legends. When she's not working, she goes for walks in the woods – preferably where fox and boar say hello to each other.

Illustrator: Lucie Göpfert, born in 1983, has a diploma in game design. She has illustrated children's books, games, and puzzles for several German publishers and also draws for museums and the theatre. She loves funny animals and quirky characters and lives with her family in Halle an der Saale.
