Funny and cheerfully illustrated stories with a bright protagonist tackling everyday life in her own way.

Staying up all night? Going by bus on one's own? Child's play, thinks Lilly Little from Walnut Lane. After all, she's five already! However, the grown-ups don't share her opinion. So Lilly either has to grow as fast as possible or prove them wrong ...

Creative People:

Author: Patrick Maria Bienstein was born in the Sauerland in 1983. After stopovers in Dortmund and Cologne, he now lives with his partner in a self-built circus waggon in Flegessen in the Weserbergland. He works as a city planner and advocates for sustainability and climate protection. Most of all, he enjoys fooling around and writing stories for children.

Illustrator: Maja Bohn, born in Rostock, trained as a bookseller after abandoning a dance apprenticeship. Afterwards, she worked in publishing in Berlin for several years. In the middle of the 90s, she studied at the Weißensee Academy of Art. Since graduation, she has worked as a freelance illustrator and author of children's and school books in Germany and abroad., Maja Bohn, born in Rostock, completed a bookseller's apprenticeship after dropping out of dance training and then worked in publishing in Berlin for several years. In the mid-nineties, she began her studies at the Berlin Weißensee School of Art.
