A lush gardening guide for available children with information on vegetables, berries, trees, animals, sustainability, upcycling and DIY projects for gardens and balconies as well as recipes for self-harvested ingredients.

Protecting our environment and biosphere is a topic more and more children are drawn to. But where to even begin? How about right in front of your door! Creating a near-natural garden or transforming your balcony into a place where humans, birds, insects, and other animals as well as flowers and plants feel at home is a great way to actively preserve and support nature and biodiversity. So let's grab some gardening tools and make our world a tiny bit better, one plant at a time!

Creative People:

Author: For over thirty years, Eliz Simon has been working and living in a former mill in Hohenlohe with her family. On her farm, she keeps milk sheep, produces cheese and sausages, and supplies her whole family with fruits and vegetables from her big self-sufficient garden.

Illustrator: After studying communication design at the RheinMain University of Applied Science in Wiesbaden, Inka Vigh lived in California, Beirut, and Budapest between 2014 and 2016. Eventually, she ended up in Mainz where she lives and works as a freelance illustrator. Whether it's something cultural or social, children's books, magazines, or coffee shops – she illustrates with joy and makes everything more beautiful!
