A colourfully illustrated non-fiction picture book that raises awareness for the importance of species and environmental protection.

In the hot savannah, there live the little giraffe and its mother and brother. There's always so much to see and to learn: How does one reach the most tasty acacia branches with one's tongue? Where's the next waterhole? Which animals are dangerous and which harmless? The little giraffe wants to know everything and embarks on an exciting journey.

Creative People:

Author: Kristina Scharmacher-Schreiber studied German in Münster and Bergamo and afterwards worked for big opera houses for many years. Since 2016, she has been working as an author and translator and has published a number of children's books. For her nonfiction works, she has received a number of awards. When she's not working on a new book, she enjoys spending her time at her favourite place, a small island amidst the rough North Sea.

Illustrator: Christine Faust studied toy and teaching aids design and should therefore design toys. However, she loves drawing even more, which is why she illustrates children's books and games and also works in the animation industry for film and television. Christine Faust lives in Magdeburg where she likes to send her children on Easter egg hunts.
